Welcome to RefWorks

What is RefWorks?

RefWorks is a web-based bibliography and citation manager that allows you to save and organize citations of journal articles, books, web sites and other sources. RefWorks automatically generates a bibliography or reference list in over 200 styles including commonly used styles like APA and MLA.

This service is freely available to all Brock students, staff and faculty and is accessible both on and off campus.

You will need to sign up for an individual account the first time you use RefWorks. Once you are in RefWorks, click on Sign up for an Individual Account (you will need to register with your Brock Email account).

Where do I find the Group Code?

When you register for your RefWorks account, you will receive an email with your username, password and Group Code. Keep this email. You will require the Group Code whenever you login. RefWorks automatically logs you in if you enter the Group Code.

that could give an identity to each place. Then, we determined the peculiarities of each site, and identified the places for bird watching. The selection of the watching sites was decided through a series of criteria (frequency of appearance and proximity of the birds, accessibility to the place, quality.

Bird diversity, birdwatching tourism and conservation in Peru: a geographic analysis

Bird Diversity, Birdwatching Tourism and Conservation in Peru: A Geographic Analysis
Lisa Puhakka, Matti Salo, Ilari E. Saarikari

Published: November 23, 2011 • DOI: 10.1371/journal.pone.0026785

Abstract

In the face of the continuing global biodiversity loss, it is important not only to assess the need for conservation, through e.g. gap analyses, but also to seek practical solutions for protecting biodiversity. Environmentally and socially sustainable tourism can be one such solution. We present a method to spatially link data on conservation needs and tourism-based economic opportunities, using bird-related tourism in Peru as an example. Our analysis highlighted areas in Peru where potential for such projects could be particularly high. Several areas within the central and northern Andean regions, as well as within the lowland Amazonian regions of Madre de Dios and Loreto emerge as promising for this type of activity. Mechanisms to implement conservation in these areas include e.g. conservation and ecotourism concessions, private conservation areas, and conservation easements. Some of these mechanisms also offer opportunities for local communities seeking to secure their traditional land ownership and use rights. (Spanish language abstract, Abstract S1).

In-Text Citations
In-text citations

- When paraphrasing or summarizing, the author’s name is followed by the year of publication
  - E.g. Morrison (1994) argues that libraries are a great place for students to start their research

Direct quotes

- With the author’s name prefacing or following the quote
  - e.g. Morrison (1994, p. 324) states that “students who start their research in the library start their research in the right place.”

- Author’s name not referenced in the text
  - e.g. She also argues that “students who don’t start their research in the library may be at a disadvantage” (Morrison, 1994, p. 325)
CITING REFERENCES IN-TEXT

General Introduction

Author's name cited in the text

When making reference to an author’s work in your text, their name is followed by the year of publication of their work:

In general, when writing for a professional publication, it is good practice to make reference to other relevant published work. This view has been supported in the work of Cormack (1994).

Where you are mentioning a particular part of the work, and making direct reference to this, a page reference should be included:

Cormack (1994, pp.32-33) states that “when writing for a professional readership, writers invariably make reference to already published works”.

Author's name not cited directly in the text
